To Whom it May Concern

This is a reference for Sandeep Jain, a recent graduate of Caltech, whom I know well. My research laboratory works at the interface between engineering and neuroscience, and Sandeep was a research assistant for me part time during one school year and full time for a summer. His work mainly involved the construction and debugging of an electronic interface between a cultured neuron network and our host computer. He showed himself to be exceptional, even among our very select group of undergraduates. He worked very effectively, with a minimum of supervision, and he was a very quick learner. I think his background in coursework and his experience in our lab make him an unusual person for research and development combining neuroscience with engineering or computer science.
